This branch of the Holst family is from Göteborg, Sweden. According to family lore, the patriarch, Andres (or Anders), supposedly migrated to Hull, England, where he was a “bonesetter” or surgeon.

Like their wives, John Oscar Holst and his brother Axel emigrated to America in the 1870s; arriving in Boston and settling into the thriving Swedish community in East Boston, Suffolk co., MA. The family surname is also spelled “Holz”; or “Holtz” and, if you look up SOUNDEX records, you are also encouraged to look up “Holt”.

John Oscar was tremendously affected by his first wife’s death. Supposedly, after she died, John Oscar took to drink, often “drinking up his paycheck” on his way home from work. His daughter, Esther, reacts to this by becoming a teetotaling, born-again Baptist who would not allow a drop of alcohol in the house. However, Esther adored her Geritol because she could “feel the vitamins running down her arm”. She never realized that Geritol was alcohol-based and, so, she was getting soused.

First Generation

1. Andres¹ HOLST was born in Sweden.[¹,²] Family lore asserts that he migrated to Hull, England and was a Bonesetter or Surgeon there.[³]

Andres married Sabina (or Saben or Sibina) OLSDOTTER who was also born in Sweden.[¹,²]

They had the following children:

Second Generation

2. John Oscar² HOLST (Andres¹) was born on 14 August 1858 in Göteborg, Sweden.[²,³] John Oscar died in Norfolk, Norfolk co., MA on 16 December 1938; he was 79y:4m:2d.[¹] He was buried on 18 December 1938 in the “Millis-Norfolk Big Cemetery” - Prospect Hill, Millis, Norfolk co., MA.[¹,³,⁴] The cause of his death was Carcinoma of Prostate with metastases to Lungs and Throat (onset: January 1938).[¹]

John emigrated from Sweden to Boston, Suffolk co., MA - arriving on 21 June 1879.[⁶] John filed his citizenship intention on 21 May 1885 and was naturalized on 15 May 1891 at age 32 (the paperwork was officially recorded on 19 September 1891).[⁶]

John Oscar was apparently a big, tall man[³] who made his kids go to work right after school. Most of the family wanted his son Albert to get more schooling, but it was not to be.[³] He made his own living as a Machinist & Locomotive Repairman in the Readville Car Shop for NY, NH, H & H Railroad. He was forced to retire in 1936 after 50 years on the job when his employers discovered that he was 75 years old. He apparently was “madder than hell” was ran about the place doing chin ups on the door frames and other feats of strength to try and prove his fitness for the job. His employers were intractable, however.[¹,²,⁴,⁵]
